This paper will make an attempt to fulfil these two needs but only within the brief compass permissible here. There will be first an attempt to explore the philosophical relationship of Husserl's concept of intentionality to Brentano's. An exposition will next be given of Husserl's concept through the various phases of its development.

Husserl's Concept of Categorial Intuition

An abstract concept is a concept which is generally taken to be of an abstract entity. The loose usage of these terms is on purpose since the present paper is supposed to be neutral with respect to the precise ontological status of abstract objects. Notice, finally, that the fact that a concept is abstract in the present sense, i.e.
